TULLYTOWN WINS SECOND GAME OF BRISTOL SERIES

Contest On Sullivan's Field Ends in 6 to 3 Victory

SERIES IS NOW EVEN

"Lefty" Rodgers' Home Run Clout Clinched the Game For the Visitors

By T. M. Juno
Tullytown won the second game of the "blood" series with Bristol A. A. on Sullivan's Field last evening by the score of 6-3. The series standing is now one all.

"Lefty" Rodgers' four base hit in the fifth clinched the game for the three F's. With Russo and Cooper on base, Lefty caught a fast DeRisi pitch and smacked it clear over McGerr's head in right field. The ball sailed over the parked cars, hit a tree and then bounced into the Otter street creek.

Two other home runs were hit. Joe Duster hit the railroad bank with a line drive in the fourth with no one on and DeRisi received a round tripper on his bungle to left field which was last seen in the tall grass.

The Tullytown boys showed what real sluggers they are. Five of the ten hits made were for extra bases. Two homers, two triples and a double were in their collection of hits.

DeRisi and Dugan had the Mulhollanders only extra base hits.

Russo again showed good stuff on the hill. Although hit harder than in any game, thus far this year, the "kid" pitcher was invincible in the pinches. In the seven innings of "gouge" baseball the A. A. nine had ten men stranded on the bases. In the final canto with two on, Russo fanned Dugan and M. Cochrane to retire the side. Three of the A. A. runners were picked off the sacks by fast pegging by this hurler.

DeRisi was found for ten hits, but also was tight in the pinches. Adroit fielding also saved the A. A. moundman.

The fielding feature of the game was pulled by Duster with the aid of "Eddie" Roe and "Larry" David who fielded splendidly all evening. In the Bristol seventh DeRisi shot a torrid grounder to the P. P. P.'s keystone guardian. The pill hit the foot of the infielder and bounced into the hands of Duster, who was running to back the play. Duster threw out the runner with a rifle peg to first base.

Barrett made a wonderful catch of David's shost left in the fourth frame.

The rubber game of the series will be played later in the season both teams having games booked for next Sunday. The A. A. meets Cornwells, and Tullytown plays St. Thomas, of Burlington at Tullytown.

RIEGELSVILLE OFFICIAL REPORTED MISSING

Authorities Fear He Met With Foul Play Enroute to Bethlehem

ACCOUNTS STRAIGHT

RIEGELSVILLE, July 29.—Postal authorities Saturday enlisted the aid of State Police in an effort to solve the mysterious disappearance of Postmaster Charles F. DeLabar, 59, of this place, from his home three weeks ago.

Inspector Williamson, of the postal department, stated that DeLabar disappeared just three weeks ago Friday after leaving his home here in an automobile to go to Bethlehem on business.

Postal inspectors have examined DeLabar's accounts and found them in excellent shape, Williamson said. Private enterprises in which the postmaster was interested were also found in order.

The postmaster is married and has a grown son. Residents of the community as well as DeLabar's family are at a loss to explain his disappearance.

That he met with foul play on the way to Bethlehem is the belief of Inspector Williamson. State police have been notified through the state headquarters at Harrisburg so that a nationwide announcement of the disappearance will be made.

Although residents of the community here have known for more than a week that Postmaster DeLabar was missing, no details of the affair were made public until Saturday when the postal authorities sought the aid of State Police.

"All we know is that DeLabar is missing from town, but for what reason we do not know," said a Riegelsville business man this morning.

When asked this morning whether Bucks county authorities have been asked to assist in the search for Postmaster DeLabar, it was stated that no request had been made.

EDDINGTON MAN FOUND INJURED ON PORCH OF HIS HOME

William Britton Unable to Explain How He Was Hurt

SAYS HE WAS ATTACKED

Wound in Left Side Resembles Bullet Hole But None Is Found

EDDINGTON, July 29.—Authorities are probing the mysterious injury sustained by a resident of Maple avenue on Saturday evening.

The injured:

William Britton, 55, Maple avenue.

Mr. Britton is employed as a watchman at the chemical plant of Keasbey & Mattison, State Road, Cornwells Heights. He left his home here Saturday evening at 5:45 to go to his employment. He reached the plant and went on duty where he continued until about eight o'clock. He relieved the day man who went to his home.

At 10:30 Saturday night Britton was found lying on his own front porch, here, bleeding from numerous wounds about the face and one in his left hip. The wound in the hip resembled a bullet wound but when it was probed at the Harriman Hospital, Bristol, no bullet was located. It was characterized as a flesh wound apparently made by some sharp instrument.

Britton remained unconscious for several hours after being found and was treated at the hospital. He returned to his home Sunday.

In speaking of the affair today Britton says that he sat at the gate which is the main entrance to the plant where he is employed, until eight o'clock, Saturday night.

"I then went to the boiler room," After leaving the boiler room Britton is unable to state what happened or where it took place.

Britton claims that he is of the opinion that he was attacked by enemies and says that they took $19 which was in the pockets of his trousers.

TWIN SISTERS WED AT DOUBLE CEREMONY

Attractive Wedding Held in Union Tabernacle, Phila., Saturday Afternoon

BY THE REV. BERGER

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, July 29.—A double wedding of unusual interest to folks of this section took place in the Union Tabernacle, Philadelphia, on Saturday at four o'clock, when William A. Dettmer, of Cornwells Heights, and Elmer Blankley, of Andalusia, took as their brides the Misses Mary Ann Foster and Margaret Foster, respectively.

The brides, who are twins, are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Foster, of 5116 Leeper, Philadelphia.

There were many participants in the ceremony which was an elaborate one. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Stanley Berger.

Attending the former Miss Margaret Foster as maid of honor was Miss Chanice at the garage of his brother-in-law of the groom. Miss Blankley was attired in green silk crepe, her dress, hat and footwear matching. The bridesmaid was Miss Bertha Fairbair, of Philadelphia, her costume being orchid. The little flower girl was Mildred Simons, of Philadelphia.

Attendants of the former Miss Mary Ann Foster were: Miss Margaret Chambers, of Philadelphia, as maid of honor; Miss Edna Wilt, of Philadelphia, bridesmaid; and Katherine Foster, Philadelphia, flower girl. The dresses, hat and footwear of Miss Chambers were in a pleasing shade of yellow; while Miss Wilt was attired in pink. The two flower girls' dresses were of white, trimmed with yellow. Each carried a basket of mixed flowers. The bridesmaids and maids of honor carried arm bouquets of rosebuds, in various shades to blend with their costumes.

Harold H. Dettmer, of Cornwells Heights, attended his brother as best man, the usher being George S. Chambers, of Philadelphia. Mr. Blankley's best man was Harold Brown, of Philadelphia, and the usher, Burton W. White.

THREE DROWN NEAR HERE OVER WEEK-END; TWO IN RIVER

Two Roebeling Girls Meet Death Seeking Relief From Heat

MAN AT HULMEVILLE

Inner Tube Burst and Bather In Neshaminy Goes To Death

Three drownings occurred in this vicinity over the week-end. Two children of Roebeling met death in the Delaware River at Florence Heights and a young Philadelphian drowned in the Neshaminy at Hulmeville.

The Philadelphian, married four weeks, who visited Hulmeville Park with a few friends Saturday afternoon was bathing in the Neshaminy Creek when he drowned.

The youth, Harry F. Waters, 23, 2531 Opal street, Philadelphia, arrived at the park with four friends. They came for the purpose of taking a swim and seeking relief from the intense heat of the city. Waters did not know how to swim but jumped from a rope with an inner tube inflated as a safeguard. The tube burst and permitted the young man to sink. The body was in the water about 23 minutes before recovery.

Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young was summoned and viewed the remains. The body was taken to the morgue of Charles Haefner, Hulmeville.

After recovery of the body from the creek every effort was made to resuscitate it. Word was telephoned to Bristol and the police responded with the pulmotor but after hard work on the part of the police and Dr. Horace Fleckenstein efforts to restore life in the body were found unsuccessful.

The body was removed to Philadelphia yesterday, and burial will be made on Wednesday in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Two Roebeling girls were drowned while swimming in the Delaware River at Florence Heights late yesterday afternoon. They were Anna Linda, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Linda, of 28 Third avenue, and Margaret Ordag, 11 years old, daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Ordag, of 34 Third avenue.

The two girls, both of whom could swim a little, went to the river together during the afternoon. At about 5:30 o'clock, Alec Barrabe, of 215 Fifth avenue, Roebeling, one of the many bathers at the popular beach, saw a child's arm and hand disappear beneath the water. Failing to see the swimmer reappear, he dove a couple of times, without avail, and then spread the alarm that someone was drowned.

Others started diving to find the victim, and word was sent to the Florence Township police, who went to the scene and began grappling for a body.

While the search was on the police were notified that the two children were missing. Therefore, when the grappling irons brought up the body of the Linda girl at 7:45 p. m., the hunt was continued and the second victim was brought out a half hour later.

It is believed that one of the girls became frightened or exhausted while beyond her depth and pulled her companion under with her.

The two bodies were viewed by Justice of the Peace Frank Absalom, of Florence, and Justice of the Peace Thomas Gallery, of Roebeling, and were taken to Roebeling in the Roebeling ambulance.

STANDARDS

The thoughts of men have struggled through centuries of difficulty to freedom from traditional autocracies, grim superstitions and ignorant fears. These tyrants laid heavy hands on human progress, but from some of them we are now delivered, and to that extent have taken into our own hands the shaping of our destinies.

But there is no great gain without some loss, and our new-found freedom has its penalties. We are on our way, but we are far from certain where we are going. The passing of the overlordship of ancient error has permitted the multiplication of new prophets and theories and codes, whose name is Legion and whose consequence is confusion. Standards we must have if we are to live at peace or make war intelligently, and the substitution of countless individual codes for the simple arrogance of old autocracy is not the proper fruit of progress. Freedom from error should make the way clear for Truth, whose laws are absolute, eternal and of universal application. When the divided loyalties of the world rally to such a standard and serve it with even a fraction of the energy that is now spent on inconsequence, deliverance will be complete and the land of promise at hand.

A SAVING NATION

This is a saving as well as a wasteful nation, paradoxical as it may seem. Of our natural resources the country is little short of prodigal. American wastefulness of forests and mines and failure to utilize water power can scarcely be too severely criticized. But when it comes to purely pecuniary saving, the people live pretty well up to the traditions of the "land of the almighty dollar."

This is indicated by current statistics of savings banks and similar institutions, which show an increasing practice of "laying aside for a rainy day" worthy of the highest commendation. The increase is shown in a variety of directions—in the kinds of institutions for savings, in the number of depositors, and in the average and gross amounts deposited.

A hundred years ago the total savings bank deposits in the United States were less than $1,250,000. Today they are nearly $25,000,000,000. We are not sure that greater progress has been made in any other respect than that. Seventy years ago there were only 8,635 depositors in savings institutions. Today there are 40,000,000.

Such figures are eloquent. It is a great thing for more than one person in every three of the entire population to have savings of—on the average—about $549. It is a great thing for the savings of the nation to amount to more than $208 for every member of its population. It is a great thing to be able to say, in the face of the gigantic public debt caused by the war, that it is fully counter-balanced by the savings accounts of the people.

Personality is never carried in a vanity case.

Insurance is all right, but driving sanely is also a good policy.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

Doylestown Borough Council fifty years ago, according to "The Intelligencer" of Wednesday, May 21, 1879, passed a resolution, instructing the committees to procure a better place for the housing of the fire engine and the hose. James Mann, Charles Hamilton and Johnson Gannagan asked Council for permission to lay pavements in front of their properties.

Accompanied by General H. G. Sichel, the president, directors, superintendent and a few friends of the Newtown Railroad, enjoyed a trout dinner at the Brick Hotel, Newtown. The party arrived in Newtown late in the afternoon and from there proceeded to the trout ponds of J. T. and J. L. Janney on Core Creek, to catch the fish. One of the members of the party was a commander on an ocean liner and he proved the champion fisherman. In a short time 15 pounds of trout were caught and again in a short time the members of the party were enjoying their dinner in Newtown.

As early as 1879, according to a half-century old publication of "The Intelligencer" under date of Saturday, July 12, 1879, Doylestown was becoming interested in the installation of telephones. This publication of the paper stated that Doylestown had several lines in successful operation. One of the first persons to have installed this then modern device was William Vaux, the grocer, who had his store connected with his residence. Thomas H. Walton had his drug store and his green houses connected. A telephone was also in use at the Doylestown Seminary. Several other residents of the borough were about to install telephones.

Copyright 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
 "ON WITH THE SHOW," is the first 100% natural color, Vitaphone picture. It is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
 "Welcome Home," a musical show trying out on the road, is stranded. Willie Durant, the financial backer, is friendly with Nita French, the star, but refuses to put up any more money. He is unsuccessfully attentive to Kitty, the stage-struck check room girl, and induces her father, "Dad" Malone, stage doorman, and her sweetheart, Jimmy, head usher, to invest their life savings in the piece. Sam Bloom, scenery builder, comes to collect, and Jimmy suggests robbing the box office. Jerry Connolly, the manager, accuses Durant of allowing the show to go broke in order to gain a hold over Kitty.

 "Sorry, kids," Jerry smiled sympathetically as the boy and girl jumped to attention at his unexpected appearance.
 "Is Sam still around," Jimmy stuttered, trying to assume an ease he didn't feel.
 "Yep," Jerry nodded, "but he's watching the show now. Looks like he's settled for the act, thank goodness!" Jerry strolled out of sight once more, and Jimmy and Kitty fell silent.
 Kitty's mind was still working on a half formulated plan that was suggesting itself. If Durant would only turn up now.

Was the Show's Angel Going to Welch?

 "Well, speaking of angels—" Kitty murmured as she turned to see Willie Durant coming towards her.

CHAPTER V
 The financial backer of "Welcome Home" was weaving his way across the stage behind the back drop, taking over-careful steps as though not quite certain of measurements or distances. His tall, well built form was encased in a light spring overcoat that hung open, revealing a smartly tailored suit of expensive pattern. A slouch hat tilted to one side of his head gave him a slightly rakish appearance. In one arm he carried a rather bulky parcel wrapped in a newspaper.

Willie Durant was one of that vast circle of New Yorkers termed by the newspapers "a man about town," and by Broadwayites an "angel" or a "sucker." In other words, Willie had plenty of time and money and no particular way of spending either. Having been left a considerable fortune by his father, he had almost immediately found himself the center of attraction for a vast army of café-tanned soldiers of fortune who were experts in the expenditure of anything.

Willie wasn't exactly dumb, but never having had to earn money, his idea of its value was slightly distorted, at least according to his father's standards. Willie liked money for what it bought him, and not for the beauty of the round and shining dollar alone. And he had found that it could buy almost anything he wanted. Yet people were attracted to Willie not alone because of his wealth. He had been good looking, even handsome, as a young man, and now the early forties had brought him a certain seasoned air that more than one woman had been known to admire. One noticeable exception, however, to the various women who had inevitably succumbed to his charms was the little cloak-room girl at the theater. And so as he saw her he put on what he believed to be his most devastating smile.

"Hello, Kitty." He stopped, wavering a little uncertainly on his feet. "How's tricks?"
 "Good evening, Mr. Durant," Kitty smiled unabashedly, exchanging glances with Jimmy. It was just as they had both expected. Durant was more than a little intoxicated. "Hello, Willie," Jerry appeared suddenly from a dark corner where he had retired to brood over his troubles. "Say, listen, Sam Bloom's going to take the scenery. You've got to do something about it."

"Don't know why," Durant retorted. "Let him take it! Never cared for it much myself, anyhow." He disposed of the matter with a grandiose wave of his hand.
 "Now, look here, Mr. Durant," Jimmy spoke up, "I may be only an usher—"
 "Head usher, m' boy, head usher," Durant corrected. "Don't be modest. It never pays t' be modest."

"Mr. Durant," Jimmy insisted, "when Kitty's Dad and I bought into this show you said you'd see it through. You aren't doing it."
 "Oh, Jimmy, be quiet," Kitty laid a restraining hand on the boy's arm.

"Am I to consider m'self reprimanded?" Durant turned a pseudo-sorrowful countenance on Jimmy and shook his head.

"Oh, you can kid me all you want, but I'm warning you, if you just stand by and let 'em close us up and make all of us lose our money, I'll—[Jimmy]—well, I'm just warning you, that's all."

Durant laughed harshly. "I appreciate the warning, my boy. I appreciate it. Now run along an' mind your own business. There's a drunk out front disturbing people. Go an' put him out!"
 Jimmy hesitated for a minute, looking first at Durant and then at Kitty, and finally strode away, too hurt and disappointed to trust himself to speak.

"Oh, don't be angry at him, Mr. Durant, please," Kitty apologized. "He didn't mean to be fresh, really. He's just worried on account of my father."

It didn't fit in with her scheme of things to have Durant in a bad humor now. If she were to get him to listen to reason she wanted him as affable as possible, and the hard glint that had come into his eyes when he had reprimanded Jimmy belied his laughter.

"S all right, Kitty," Durant was answering her. "Don't you bother your pretty lil' head 'bout it at all. You're a nice lil' girl an' I like you." He patted her cheek caressingly.

And because she wanted him in a good humor Kitty smiled and made no outward show of resentment at his touch.

"Wait a second," Jerry grabbed Durant's arm as the latter started to walk unsteadily away. "I want to talk to you! We've got to come to some terms. I can't let things go on as they are."

"I'm too busy!" Durant caught hold of Jerry's coat lapel, poking at it with his forefinger as though to impress his words more deeply. "Have to take this package up to Nita."

"That's all right, Willie, Kitty'll take it for you," Jerry seized the package and thrust it quickly into Kitty's hands. "Take this in to Miss French's dressing room," he told the girl, at the same time motioning for her to leave.

"Now, don't snatch things 'way from me like that," Durant mumbled. "I don't like it, see? I don't like it. Don't like to have personal belongings interfered with."

"Oh, forget it," Jerry advised tartly. "Now, look here, Durant, I thought you were going to see this show through. You gave me your word when we started out that you were going to put up all the necessary capital. I thought you were a gentleman. I didn't ask you to sign any hide-bound contract or put any money in the bank. I thought your word was worth something."

"I am a gentleman! I'm a gentleman, an' I always was a gentleman," Durant repeated impressively. "But so far 's this show's concerned, I'm all washed up, see—all washed up! You don't get 'nother penny from this sucker."

"You mean that?"
 "I certainly do. I mos' certainly do!" Durant's voice was slightly maddled, but there was no mistaking its finality. "I'm all washed up an' you don't get 'nother penny."
 "Oke," Jerry snapped. "That's all I wanted. I just wanted to hear you make a definite statement. And now I'm going to tell you exactly why you welched on us."

"You needn't bother. I'm not interested in hearing you talk," Durant interrupted. "Not interested 'tall. Don't want to hear 'nother 'bout it."

"I don't care what you want to hear," Jerry was becoming more and more decisive. So far as he could see he was at the end of his rope, anyhow. He was tired of stringing everyone along, and he felt as though he might just as well get everything out of his system while he had a chance.

"The reason you backed out," he continued, "is because you can't get to first base with Kitty."

He was making a wild guess but he believed that he had something to go on. Putting two and two together, he thought it was quite possible that he had added up the simple sum correctly, and he was just a little more than angry. "That's a wild one, even for you, Jerry," Durant snorted, a dull red slowly suffusing his face.

COSTUMES OF LIGHTWEIGHT WOOLEN TUNE IN ON A VARIED PROGRAM

TIME was when woolen weaves flourished only when the thermometer descended the scale. And now? Sentiment in regard to the timeliness of woolen fabrics has completely changed. And why? Well, because the woolens themselves are that transformed, modernized, as it were, they tune in to the scheme of things this whole year round.

True, it takes some stretch of the imagination to believe that the sheer dainty phantomweight wool georgettes and crepes and lacelike novelty weaves for which the world of fashion is showing such enthusiasm this season are descendants from the sturdy prosaic utilitarian woolens of pre-modern days. It is enough to convert even the most skeptical into ardent evolutionists. But thanks to the weaver's magic art, the miracle has been wrought, with the result that the new woolens are playing a leading role in the rising and summer style program.

One of the most unique and interesting fashion shows ever presented was the Golden Fleece pageant which recently played to a record-breaking audience, turning away over five thousand in one week in New York, later repeating its triumphs and record attendance in Chicago. The costumes were all of wool, ranging from bathing suits through sports clothes to afternoon apparel. Many of the woolens were that sheer and supple they draped like softest of silk. Others were as diaphanous as the daintiest of chiffons. Still others carried lacelike patternings which characterized them as "wool laces."

A new fabric which made a decidedly favorable impression was white wool pique. The sleeveless frock to the left in the picture is of this charming weave. The white of the wool pique is contrasted with a piping of butter yellow outlining neckline, sleeves, the tabbed skirt yoke as well as the graceful jabot. This frock was posed at the style show under a butter-yellow flannel coat, the same made with a draped cape. White kid shoes and a white soft straw hat complemented this costume, as did also the handbag of white wool pique with butter-yellow trim.

The bright red wool crepe two-piece jacket suit, to the right in this illustration, has an accordion-plaited skirt with a scalloped hemline. It is worn with a white-ground striped double-breasted blouse, thus again testifying to the supreme modishness of stripes.

PITTSBURGH, July 29—Air-mindedness is on the increase in Western Pennsylvania, and within a month at least three new airports will have been opened in this portion of the Keystone State, with others in immediate prospect.

The western gateway to the long climb through the Allegheny Mountains is to be protected by the new Legion airport at DuBois, under supervision of the Department of Commerce, as an intermediate landing field. This airport is one of the finest in the state, according to commerce department officials who attended the dedication.

At Pittsburgh a new amphibian base is to be established as quickly as docking and mooring facilities are completed. This project will furnish the city with a landing at the "Y" junction of the Three Rivers, in any wind.

Ground has been broken and leveling and draining begun for a new field at Greensburg, Pa., where 700 acres are to be devoted to construction of air landing facilities.

Nationally famous aeronautical figures were present at the official dedication of a new Department of Commerce approved field at Johnstown, Pa. Charles M. Schwab, steel king, and Miss Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic flyer, were present at opening of the Johnstown field.

Throughout the western portion of the state various aerial projects are taking tangible form, expected before the end of the summer to produce development unparalleled in the district as a whole.

According to aviation authorities of various companies, the Western Pennsylvania region and the tri-state district have literally "taken the air."

READING, Pa., July 29—(INS)—"It takes two," soliloquized Salvatore

Butto gloomily, "to make a bargain," whereupon Salvatore bled himself forthwith to court with a divorce application which relates a strange story.

Salvatore, the application declares, "bought" a wife back in 1926 and repents the bargain—in fact, Salvatore thinks his purchase was anything but a bargain.

In 1926, Butto decided to get married. Three men, in Philadelphia, decided to help him. They told Butto of a lady, whose husband was dead but unburied, who would willingly join herself in wedlock if she were paid $500 to bury her first spouse.

Butto was in love, but he was likewise canny. He declared he would pay cash only after the ceremony. After the wedding, the two men came to Reading and Butto paid them $500.

The men departed, wishing Butto joy of his "bargain."

One week later, Mrs. Butto left and Butto, his faith in human nature shattered, states he has not seen his bride since that day.

RIVERSIDE

One of the most dramatic court scenes ever shown on the screen is featured in First National's "His Captive Woman," which comes to the Riverside Theatre, tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday.

It is a highly dramatic story adapted from "Changeling" by Donn Byrne, and is a George Fitzmaurice production featuring Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill.

The story opens with a woman on trial accused of the murder of her lover. Highly dramatic and tense throughout, it provides several unusual plot developments and is said to create suspense from start to finish.

Miss Mackaill portrays the woman and Sills the policeman who trailed her half-way around the world and brought her back to face trial. The trial is one of the big dialogue sequences of the picture.

The Hawaiian Islands provide the scenic background for much of the story, and the sound effects which accompany the picture add to its dramatic highlights.

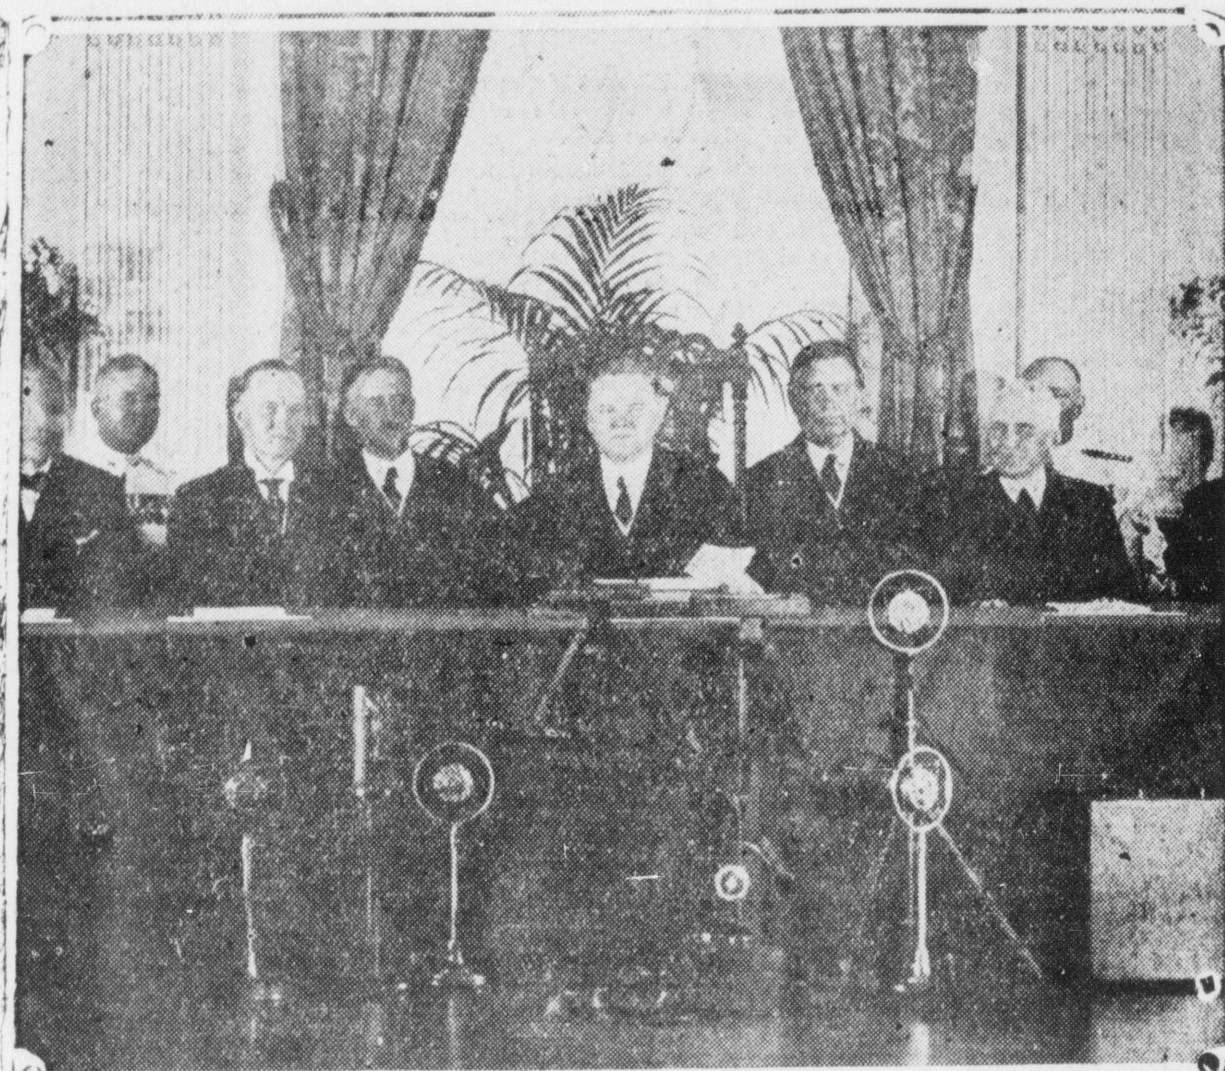

A splendid supporting cast is seen, including many natives of the distant islands.

An Eskimo, brought to New York on a sightseeing trip, describes the American girls as "onnanutzak." That leaves only "onnan" and "ziak" to be explained.
